or

Discuss M. C. Chagla's views about himself as expressed in the chapter "Personal."

- (b) Explain with reference to the context: 4

The art of living together is the most difficult of all the arts to practice, and if two persons of different faiths can live together in the closest intimacy for a whole life time, surely it cannot be said that the existing differences between the various committees are irreconcilable.

or

When a man reaches the end of the road and sees before him the vast horizon and becomes conscious of the infinity before him, he naturally turns round to see the way that lies behind and by which he has come up, remembering the many turnings, the ones which he took and the others he

Yellow, and black, and pale, and hectic red, Pestilence-stricken multitudes: O thou,
Who chariotest to their dark wintry bed

or

The woods are lovely, dark and deep,
But I have promises to keep,
And miles to go before I sleep,
And miles to go before I sleep.
